

21ST CENTURY FEMINISMS

ISSUES IN GLOBAL STUDIES (ARSC300)

Fall 2018 LECTURE SERIES

As part of the 2017-2018 Women's March activities, people around the world participated in powerful non-violent action to bring attention to long-standing and continuous oppressions based in gender, sexual identity, race, and class inequalities. This lecture series addresses key debates within and about feminism as well as the history and practice of feminism, drawing from examples such as voting and reproductive rights for women, civil rights activism, the Stonewall riots, and 'women in development.' The objectives are to bring clarity to thinking about feminism and cultivate an open and inclusive set of ideas about how to address structural oppressions and inequalities in the world.
